

What do you think about the proposed Rushy Mead wind farm?

Can you tell fact from fiction?

Will the cost to the countryside out-weigh the 'green' benefits?

Others are concerned and have set up a web-site;

Or get the facts from an expert in Global Business;

Professor Michael Jefferson will take

“A Cool Look at Wind’s Pretentions”

Thursday 16th September 7.15

(doors open 6.45)

At Bearwood College Theatre, Sindlesham

Professor Jefferson has experience of global business over many years, having worked for Shell as their Chief Economist and now lectures at the Centre for International Business and Sustainability. He received a certificate from the IPCC for his contribution when they were given the Nobel Peace Prize in 2007, and as an author he has written or co-written on topics such as energy, economics and the environment. Interestingly for us locally, he is recently quoted in a national newspaper as saying – ‘incentives designed to help Britain meet green energy targets are encouraging firms to site their developments badly’.

Is Rushy Mead sited ‘badly’?

Come along to find out!
